- JOHNSTONELLA Brand, Repert. Spec. Nov. Regni Veg. 21: 249. 1925.
- Johnstonella* consists of plants with nutlets that are usually triangular or ovate (rarely lance-ovate) in shape, usually have a “knife-like,” sharply angled, and often narrowly-winged (rarely rounded) margin, the nutlets of most species are heteromorphic in size and shape. The nutlet sculpturing often consists of prominent, regularly spaced, whitish tubercles, although in some taxa the tubercles are smaller and more numerous. Two species, one with two varieties, have existing names in Johnstonella: J. racemosa (I. M. Johnston) Brand (designated the type for the genus; see Johnston 1925) and J. inaequata (Watson) Brand (Brand 1925). Johnstonella racemosa is perennial in duration, which is rare in the Cryptanthinae outside of Oreocarya. (A variety of this species, J. racemosa var. lignosa (I. M. Johnst.) Brand, has not been recognized as different in recent treatments.) New combinations are needed for eleven species (one with three varieties), recognized here as members of this genus (see earlier discussion).

A KEY TO THE GENERA OF THE CRYPTANTHINAE

A key to the genera of the Cryptanthinae is presented here, modified (in part) from Kelley (2012) and Kelley et al. (2012). We note that the genus Plagiobothrys s. l. is polyphyletic in our study and will likely require segregation into separate genera in the future.

1. Nutlets spreading 2
2. Calyx lobes in fr unequal, upper 2 >> others, partly fused, arched over 1 nutlet, with 5–10 stout spines each with hooked bristles; nutlets Harpagonella
